

Social Work, Reflective Practice: An Introduction to Civic Reflection

This workshop will introduce participants to civic reflection, a practice that can help individuals and organizations engaged in service and other forms of civic work talk comfortably about values, think more deeply about choices, and respond more imaginatively to the needs of their communities. In an era of budget cutbacks and increasingly greater workloads, civic reflection provides an opportunity for needed conversation about the profound experience and challenge of service to others.

Participants will engage in exercises to support their work and to bring a fresh and needed perspective to such basic questions of service and philanthropy as: Whom do we serve in this work and to what end? What do we expect of those we serve, and what happens when those expectations are not met? To whom are we accountable? What is the larger good toward which we are working?

Please Note: Upon completing this workshop, participants are welcome to attend the follow-up to this session, "Social Work, Reflective Practice: Facilitating Civic Reflection" on Friday, October 31.*

*One-time registration discount for both workshops: $190, 9 CECs by Wednesday October 8, 2008

Instructor:

Adam Davis

Senior Research Associate,
Project on Civic Reflection;
Executive Director, Camp
of Dreams

Date:

Friday, October 17, 2008

Time:

9:00 a.m. – Noon

Location:

Hyde Park – SSA

Tuition: $75

CECs: 3

Registration deadline:

Wednesday, October 8, 2008